Profane language in the brain and in the language classroom

Friday 2 February 2024 18:00 (50 minutes)

We will look at explanations from brain science about where profanity is processed and stored in the brain, to what extent we can control our production of expletives, and the emotional causes and effects of the use of profanity. We will then turn our attention to our role as educators and discuss whether we should broach this topic with students when they are bound to come across it and what stumbling blocks they may have when learning this language on their own.

Presenters: Prof. GILLIS-FURUTAKA, Amanda (Kyoto Sangyo University); GREEN, Jennifer (Miyagi Gakuin Women's University)
